Modernizing and Mobile-izing Legacy Applications with Adobe and Accenture Public Service Platform

Join Accenture and Adobe on March 12th for a complimentary seminar on enabling the government enterprise for mobile technology.

The days of delivering customer service through paper correspondence, call-centers and walk-in facilities are coming to an end. Data from the Pew Internet and American Life Project show that mobile adoption has reached 88% of all Americans. Additionally, it is projected that by mid-2013, more Internet access in the United States will be from mobile devices than PCs. It is clear that customers are migrating to the Smartphone as their preferred communication method. Is your agency ready for the mobile revolution?

Adopting a mobile enterprise platform is a critical step for your agency. Adobe empowers agencies to reimagine their business in the context of the mobile revolution to reduce operational costs, while improving customer service in ways businesses never thought possible.

Integrating mobile user experiences into your existing infrastructure has never been easier. With pre-configured, SOA-based enterprise architecture, Accenture Software allows you to modernize legacy applications in record time. The Accenture Public Service Platform is experiencing rapid adoption by public agencies looking to reduce technology and management costs and improve service delivery.
