Rutgers' Mini-Master of Public Administration

House

program can help you improve your critical management skills. You'll join a select group of professionals who have enhanced their leadership capacity through this unique program offered by the Department of Public Policy and Administration and Rutgers' Center for Executive Leadership in Government.

In the Mini-MPA™, you'll learn:

- How to use your personal communication style effectively.
- New skills needed by today's public managers
- How to measure and improve relationships within and between organizations.

Classes start April 4th in downtown New Brunswick. Offered on 5 Fridays, the program covers 10 topics critical to leadership success in public and nonprofit organizations.

- Learn from Rutgers faculty and distinguished practitioners.
- Explore key areas important to managing in the public and nonprofit sectors.
- Acquire tools that can enhance your leadership skills.
- Network with other professionals.

All materials, breakfasts and lunches are included with your registration.

Enroll today! Space is limited. Download a flier and registration form.

Mini MPA™ Alumni Talk about Their Experiences

"In a limited amount of time (the instructor) really hit home on the fundamentals of managing and leading people..."

"I found that the instructors were experienced and well-versed in their respective areas of expertise, adding wisdom and credibility to their materials."

"...the Rutgers Mini-MPA™ program was a valuable use of my time as an elected official. The experts who taught the classes discussed real issues in NJ municipal government."
