Subject: This weeks NJDEP Podcast: Bats

This week's episode of Discover DEP is now live on the DEP website. It focuses on bats in New Jersey and National Bat Week, October 24-31. Mackenzie Hall, biologist and leader of bat projects here at DEP, sits down with Bob Bostock to discuss bats in New Jersey, specifically their value to New Jersey's environment, DEP's role in managing bat populations, and how people can get involved not only in National Bat Week but in helping to re-establish New Jersey's declining bat population.

This episode can be found at nj.gov/dep/podcast/.

For more information on bats in New Jersey, please visit <http://www.conservewildlifenj.org/protecting/projects/bat/>.
For more information on Bat Week, please visit <http://www.batweek.org/>.

Mackenzie was featured in a Creature Show episode on bats, which can be viewed at <https://vimeo.com/142893399>.

In addition to accessing the podcast on the DEP homepage, you can download our podcasts and subscribe to future editions through iTunes and Google Play.
